Christmas Time at S. P. Dunham's.

It means a good deal more than Christmas times in some stores. It means that we have been to work on this exhibit for nearly a year. Some folk depend on the last few days before Christmas or the last few weeks before Christmas to get ready. They depend upon just simply the name of Christmas and advertising to do business. They make the mistake of their life naturally.

Some Important Store Features for Christmas.

An art gallery with nearly 2000 pictures. A basement holiday fair that covers the space of four of the largest stores in Trenton. Christmas gifts furniture—five immense floors of it. Toys, games and dolls fill a half of one big basement store. Bring a brace, five chairs and lamps—double the showing of last year. Home-made novelties and jewelry make up a big section of the broad street at 20. A big department that has received for Christmas special over 50,000 volumes.

Well these are only a few of the many that you will see, and you will see a landmark of last year, things are new from basement to roof, new in construction and arrangement, of course new in stock entirely.

This old store never contained a Christmas show to anyone to begin with this one, we have acquired more territory since last year, you know; gives us better facilities for serving you.

Cold Weather

Is approaching, and in order to be ready for it, you should have a nice warm suit or overcoat. If you will call at my store I will be pleased to measure you for same at prices which will suit your pocketbook.

ALL GARMENTS GUARANTEED.

Bring out your last winter's clothes and let me put them in good shape for you.

A SHADOW OF THE ROCKIES.

The mountain from my window lay crumpled. Their solemn peaks with coronas of mist. Over which the snows of dawn and sunset flow. And then, high ridges, were a shadow of the Rockies. With evening came a mighty shadow of the Rockies. Across my doorway in the misty night. And high above the latter mountain range. Faint, as the twilight tapers their outlines hold. Then from the heights the spirit of repose. Sealed upward, with the peace that long has lain.

Secure amid the deep, untrodden snows—

A shadow of the Rockies, for which my soul is faint.

That from the towering peak upon the mountain side.

And pours its light upon the falling plain.

THE PORTRAIT

How an Artist Was Haunted by a

Pale-faced Bride.

Two men strolled together through the galleries on the opening day of the annual exhibition. One, a young man, a blond, looking young fellow of a common type,

but the other was one of those men that people involuntarily turn and look at, a swath of dark without a tinge of red in the cheeks, dark, dreamy eyes and clear regular features. The pair stopped before a life-size female figure which bore for title the words, "The Perpetual perpetuum." The picture represented a young woman in bridal dress, with myrtle wreath and veil—a fresh, girlish face of peculiar beauty, with very deep blue eyes and chestnut hair, but pale and woefully sad, as if with a foreboding of death. The contrast between the expression and the youthful beauty and bridal array was a triumph of expression, and the picture drew fair to make a great success.

"The finest thing in the whole show!"

exclaimed the blond young man with enthusiasm, stepping back and regarding the picture with half-closed eyes. "It does not look like a picture, my dear sir, but—but I envy you, that's all! It's—

it's a poem!"

"And yet, do you know, 15 years ago

I didn't have such a thing to save my life," said the other, "and for a long time I couldn't do anything worth hanging, and the queerest thing about it is that it was this very picture—or, at least, the idea of it—that kept me a difficult. It nearly killed me, in fact. Oh, no, it isn't a love affair, but it's one of the things that dream of in your philosophy of that sort of people. I'll tell you the whole story, if you care for it. It has one advantage over most of such yarns—

it's true."

The young man nodded assent, the two sat themselves on a sofa opposite the picture, and the artist told his tale as follows:

"The history of this picture goes back to my early childhood. I am now well on the wrong side of 50, but I remember very well how, when I was 10, I was lived with my parents in the little university town of G. I was haunted by a singular vision of the pale little bride over which I never left my day, and night, waking or dreaming. And in one particular the vision was not like the picture. The bride I saw always had her eyes closed. I do not remember her openly smiling. I do not remember her looking sad. I do not remember her looking at me. I do not remember her

looking at me. I do not remember her

looking at me. I do not remember her

THURSDAY NOVEMBER 29, 1900.

The Bucks has defied the United States, this is the day we get the best of her.

It will not be a very joyous Thanksgiving for Agribudino, the outlaw, and his Boston Junta.

The Yordley Review celebrates its fourth anniversary by putting on "long" trousers and expanding to a five-column quarto.

It is now stated that Senator Pettigrew, the scold, intends to talk Senator Hanna's ship would fly to death at the next session of Congress. The bill has one advantage; it can return later.

The compilation of the records of the war of the rebellion under government supervision was begun 28 years ago. It is nearing completion. It consists of 128 volumes of 1000 pages each. The set weighs 700 pounds. 11,000 copies are printed. They cost $2,750,000.

Mrs. Mary E. Lense, political agitator of Wichita, Kansas, is seeking a divorce from her husband, Charles Lense. Incompetency and failure to provide is the fair one's grounds for separation. Mrs. Lense has given abundant evidence that she is thoroughly capable of taking care of herself.

In the recent election President McKinley carried six States which went for Bryan four years ago—Kansas, Nebraska, South Dakota, Utah, Washington and Wyoming. These States have a total of thirty-two electoral votes. Mr. McKinley lost but one State carried by him in 1896—Kentucky, and that was stolen for the Democratic ticket.

Why has all the harrangue concerning "imperialism," "oligarchy or subject," and "destruction of the Republic" ceased? The coming four years is going to prove one of two things—either Democracy is an outrageous liar or else a confirmed old jobbernow. Hereafter it will only be necessary to remember the predictions of 1896 and 1900 to prove the Democratic party ridiculous.

The Incoming Legislature should lose no time in taking up the subject of election reform. The prostitution of the ballot, especially in Philadelphia, has become a fearful disgrace. The Bucks county members have had the benefit of the experience of one term in the Legislature, and they can make themselves felt in a crusade for a new law which will reduce to a minimum the chances of the stuffers and repeaters to thwart the will of a majority.

The fact that the Philadelphia North American is under the curse of the city administration, does not seem to stand that paper's growth or cloud its prospects. It is declared that Mr. Wannamaker's journal will issue an afternoon edition within the next few weeks, and that a Sunday edition is also contemplated. It is expected to occupy a portion of the new twenty-story North American building, corner of Broad and Sansom streets, about December 15.

When Nebraska was a Populist stronghold its Legislature prescribed severe penalties for the building of railroads and the running of trains. Transportation was treated as a crime. The managers of the roads, thought this view unjust and the supreme court, not having the virus of Populism virulently, has sustained them. This will please the corporations and the people as well, for Nebraska has recovered from its attack, Senator Allen being about the only symptom remaining of the old disease.

The total cost of holding the recent election in Bucks county was $6008.96. The sheriff's proclamation was published in seven newspapers at a cost of $1964.16. It cost $464.10 to print the ballots, $165.25 for tally sheets, labels, etc. To deliver the ballots to the polling places caused the expenditure of the sum of $97. The election officers received $2968.35. The two expert accountants who canvassed the returns before the court received $40 as compensation, and the return judge who carried the Congressional vote to Montgomery county was paid $10.

Philadelphia, and the Union League in particular, were honored on Saturday evening by the presence of President McKinley, his entire cabinet with the exception of Secretary Root, who is in Cuba, Vice-President-elect Roosevelt, Senators Lodge and Walcott. The occasion was the celebration of Founder's Day at the League. Practically the entire National Administration was the guest of the League.

As a candidate who has been elected, his remarks carried great weight. His reference to the Philippines which the inhabitants thereof were assured a "peaceful and benevolent government" under American sovereignty, was received with applause. Bryan's campaign argument was diagnosed in an instant, when in regard to so-called "imperialism" the President said: "Be not disturbed. There is no danger from empire; there is no fear for the Republic."

The members of the Legislature from Bucks county at the coming session should by all means participate in the election of a United States Senator. The people will not stand a repetition of the dead-lion performance at Harrisburg. It remains with the members to exercise their judgment as to the best course to pursue to obtain the desired end, but they should be careful and not throw themselves outside the pale of the Republican party. It was owing entirely to the loyalty to the ticket of the stalwart members of the party that the members were re-elected and Messrs. Edwards, Winslow and Wilkinson are not desirous of ending their political careers, they should guardedly pick their steps. Fusion with Democrats on organization, election of Senator, and distribution of spoils may be a tempting bait, but it is a policy that ends political life. No attention whatever should be paid to the dyspeptic carriages of those who have been opposed to everything from President McKinley's administration down. All that is required of the members is to be true to themselves and the Republicans of Bucks county.

DOYLESTOWN

Rev. O. W. Whitaker, Bishop of the Eastern Diocese of Pennsylvania, conducted the morning service at St. Paul's Episcopal church on Sunday, confirming a class of eleven members. The Bishop spoke upon the efficacy of prayer, and said that to pray for others is more becoming in Christian life than to pray for one's self. A large number of people were present to hear the Bishop's address and to witness the confirmation services.

James and Morris Gungah, who conduct a wallpaper and news store in the Leasap building, cleverly captured a thief on Saturday evening. The store had been robbed upon several occasions, the principal plunder being the contents of the cash drawers. On Saturday evening the Gungah brothers secreted themselves in the store, and about midnight saw a young couple enter by the unguarded side door to which he had gained access by entering the Leasap building. The light was suddenly turned on and James Gungah sprang the burglar. He was taken to the Fair Bell, aged about 15, a pupil of the public school, who was conspicuous for his good behavior and studious and bright mind. The boy's teachers and friends were exceedingly surprised when he was taken to the Leasap building. The light was suddenly turned on and James Gungah sprang the burglar. The boy's teachers and friends were exceedingly surprised when he was taken to the Leasap building.

The Daughters of Liberty, a flourishing Doylestown organization, listened to a patriotic sermon on Sunday, preached for their special benefit by Rev. John H. Deming, pastor of the First Baptist Church. This happening on a very significant day when looked at in one light. It indicated the vast strides women are making in usurping what selfish men have heretofore considered their special prerogative. Not only do these Daughters of Liberty care and care and ride wheels when they feel like it, but they marched in a body to the church like veterans or soldiers of the State to hear the discourse on civil government. The pastor talked to them concerning political corruption, war, trusts, free speech and a free press, and while they cannot vote it is safe to assume that the address will bear good fruit, arousing the women who compose the order to exercise what influence they may possess in urging their husbands, sons or brothers to heed the admonitions of the minister.

A will contest that did not involve much money, but which served to show how bitter feeling may be engendered among people who are kin, was heard by register John T. Fish on Monday morning. The story is this: Mary Goddard, aged 80, a resident of New Britain township, in December of 1899, made a will before Justice Summers of Onitash, devising her little estate of about $1200 to her daughter, Mrs. William, Enos and Daniel Goddard, Angeline Kratz and John Smith. The executor of the will was John S. Kratz and William Goddard. It appeared that William Goddard, with his brother John, now deceased, had each received $200 during the mother's lifetime, and in her will the testatrix provided that the other children should have the same. The two brothers, Mrs. William, Enos and Daniel Goddard, filed a caveat, alleging that this money had been a gift, and that their sister, Angeline, had unduly influenced the mother in the making of the will. The executor and the executors by Charles F. Meyers, Esq. The Register heard only the contestant's side of the case and decided to admit the will to probate.

A conference under the care of the Yearly and Quarterly meetings of the Society of Friends was held in the Doylestown House here on Sunday. The topic under consideration was improper publications. The principal speaker was Henry W. Wilbur, of the average Sunday School Library contains the veriest trash, and had the power of the censor he would first move upon these libraries rather than the making of the Sunday books, he said, were so good they are good for nothing, giving children an entirely false standard of life, with their over-sweetened, saintly characters. To destroy bad literature he was ready to go, but to advertise it by haranguing against it, Mr. Wilbur did not agree with the statement that the worst form of bad literature is the one that is advertised. He said the press is the exact counterpart of the individual and the general public, which always prefers bad and sensational news to that which is good. The press only caters to demand, and it is that demand shows a perverted taste the public is responsible for its share in bringing about whatever condition may exist. Mr. Wilbur would not wish to see the press and only the best and would make them household friends.

John Selden is on the sick list. Miss Lizzie Johnson is looking up some of her friends in the Manor. Master John Brooks was laid up for a few days with neuritis in the head. William McClure and Miss Sadie McOlester were visiting their uncle last Sunday.

Owing to the inclement weather there were no services in the chapel on Sunday last.

Ed Greene sold 1500 bundles of cordwood to the William H. Moon Co., of Morrisville, the parties hauling it themselves with their own teams. They were busy getting it home before the late rainstorm, finishing it on last Saturday.

The heavy gust of wind last week played havoc with the corn fields, which were standing out in the field, leveling it to the ground. Even some of the ricks, where the wind had a fair sweep, didn't escape, taking off the roof and carrying it in all directions.

Harry Brown, of Hulmeville, was in town on Sunday.

Mr. O. W. Spencer was visiting Frank Gearhart, of Holland, Pa., on Sunday.

Miss Eva Fish and Anna Sands, of Fallington, were visiting in town on Friday.

Miss Edna Spencer was visiting Miss Eva Fish, of Fallington, on Wednesday night.

Ed Schaeffer, who has been seriously ill of some time, is able to walk about again.

Robert Scott has secured a position as helper in Baldwin's locomotive works, Philadelphia. He is on night duty at present.

Owing to the preparation for the "roast pig supper" on Thanksgiving night, the monthly business meeting has been postponed until Tuesday, Dec. 4.

Miss Eva Stittler, of Gulf Mills, Montgomery county, who taught the public school here last term, was visiting Mrs. Amador Brown on Saturday and Sunday.

TULLYSTOWN

When the Gazette factiously remarked that the insurgents, in their claims of defections from the stalwart ranks, that presently the insurgent papers would probably announce the seceding of Robert Linton, the editor of that paper no doubt, spoke in a sarcastic vein, believing that this was beyond the range of probability as Linton was regarded as an insurgent of the insurgent. But, Lo! and behold! the Evening Telegraph the other evening announced in apparent seriousness that Robert Linton had decided not to go into the party caucus and will stand with the insurgents in the fight for United States Senator. The predictions of the insurgent organs that the late election would result in the overthrow of the stalwart machine in Philadelphia were declared false at the time. The results of the election shows that the stalwarts made substantial gains in Philadelphia. The silly attempts of the insurgent organs to belabor their cause by publishing the portraits of Legislators who have announced their intention of staying out of the caucus, when everyone knew that their position was not the subject of election, does not tend to increase the respect of the reading public for these journals. Having sold out their own self-respect for full page advertisements, they now stand in the front of the public eye as the most contemptible of the press.

One of the oldest, if not the oldest resident of the borough, Joseph Leasap, passed away last Thursday. Mr. Leasap, who was 84 years of age, has been for the past year confined to the house. He resided with his sister, Mrs. Adelaide Marston, of the Leasap family. Till within the past two years he was seen daily about town and was well and favorably known throughout this vicinity. He was a member of the Leasap family and a regular attendant at church as long as he was able to go to the services. The funeral services, which were largely attended, were held at his late residence, Rev. W. Gray Jones and Rev. Thomas J. Leasap, of the State and National churches, conducted the services. The interment was in the old burying ground of the Christian Church, where the body was laid beside that of the deceased one's wife.

MORRISVILLE

Thomas Gordon, of Kluge avenue, Trenton, was found drowned in Taylor Basin, Morrisville, on Sunday morning last. His body was first discovered by Harvey Wharton, Augustus and Charles Gordon, of Morrisville, who were fishing in the basin at the time. When found the dead man's body was standing in an upright position, and had the appearance of a person who might have waded into the water, the topmost part of his head and also his cap being visible above the surface.

Coroner William H. Kunsman was at once hastened during the night to the scene of the drowning. Arrived at the scene he found the body of the man who was found in the Taylor Basin. The body was taken to the morgue and the coroner's jury being empaneled and the coroner's inquest was held at the Hotel. The coroner's jury consisted of Foreman William H. Kunsman, and Jurors: Benjamin Pease, Edward A. Neuman and Jesse Morris.

The only means of identification on the drowned man's person was a one dollar bill, a number of bottles, and a pay envelope containing the name of T. Gordon, with the amount of the last pay received by him.

The deceased was about five feet six inches in height and weighed about 165 pounds and was employed about some of the rubber mills at Trenton. As he had been drinking with a few dollars of company on Saturday night in Trenton, and also in Morrisville, it is thought that he had been intoxicated he wandered near the basin and fell in. The coroner's jury rendered a verdict in accordance with the testimony.

Council held a special meeting the other evening, to take some action in reference to the collection of the delinquents to the tax collector. It was stated that the delinquents since 1897 have not yet been closed, owing to the tardiness in the collection in forcing the delinquents to pay their taxes.

Ground was broken the other day for building new abutments for the proposed iron bridge across the canal on Smith street. It is expected that the bridge will be completed in a few weeks.

Records of Wars Prove That General Sherman's View Was Right.

During the Franco-Prussian war there were over 200 battlefields ghastly captured and shot. Most of these were actually won by the Prussians, so as to be mistaken for the former.

It is said to relate that a considerable number of these plunderers were women and that during the campaign, the French soldiers were constantly robbing them from peasant women, who brought gold and silver watches, diamond jewelry and other valuables. One woman, long after the campaign, was visited by a certain jeweler three times a week, each time bringing some valuable article with her, such as a gold cigar case, a gold watch and so on.

The man she dealt with was known to the geodermes as a receiver of stolen property, and upon searching his premises they found in a cellar over $25,000 worth of valuable articles, which he had purchased at ridiculous rates from these women, who had undoubtedly plundered the dead and dying during the war.

From the records of the war it is found that for plundering the dead on the field of battle, confessed to having murdered half a dozen men and mutilated over 50 during the practice of his cowardly work. The French soldiers were found with 50 watches, besides a number of pocketbooks, letters and letters containing photographs. This brutal plunderer was captured and sent to a prison. He was a Prussian officer who had had his legs maimed by a shell—Regiment.

It's Time Wasted

And strength wasted, to try to push back the rising tide with a broom. It's just as great a waste of time and a far more serious waste of strength to try to push back the rising tide of disease with the "nervines," "compounds" and "nervine foods" which simply drug the nerves into a drunken stupor. You may think you feel good? So does whiskey, while the feeling lasts, but the reaction is dangerous and deadly. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is a powerful medicine. It contains no alcohol, opium, cocaine or other narcotic. It strengthens the body by purifying the blood and giving it the strength of that vital fluid. It cures diseases of the stomach and organs of digestion and nutrition and thus removes the obstacles to a perfect nourishment of the whole system.

BULLIED THE BULLY.

ONE RAILWAY TRIP FOR WHICH TERRY THE TERROR PAID.

On This Occasion the Bad Man Fell in With a Train Conductor Who Was as Firm as a Rock as He Was of Discretion.

James Terry, the terror of the Red Rock mining district, had a reputation for trying to ride on railway trains without paying his fare. So when the train men saw him get aboard they thought there would be trouble.

As the train moved out of the station and the conductor, Billy McMaisters, started through the cars to collect tickets, the Terror, who had dropped into a rear seat in the last car, was very much interested in as much of the passing landscape as he could see out of the car window in the gathering darkness. Finally the conductor reached the Terror and stretched out his hand for a ticket. But it was no use. Mr. Terry kept his eyes fastened on the whirling panorama of lights outside. McMaisters began to realize that he was looking for trouble.

"Ticket, please," said McMaisters. He got no response. Becoming slightly annoyed, he placed his hand on the shoulder of the Terror. That worthy then turned and seeing the conductor's outstretched hand grasped it heartily, exclaiming:

"Howdy? I'm glad to see yer."

McMaisters, losing patience, shouted: "Where's your ticket? How far are you riding?"

"A' sight the Terror, 'is 'at all? Why, I'm a free' of 'e president of this here pike, 'I ride for auttill. See, 'at goes."

"Well, it don't go, either," said McMaisters. "You either pay your fare or get off."

"An' he raised his hand and pulled the signal rope, notifying the engineer to stop the train.

The train stopped and Mr. Terry made no motion to get off.

"Here, you boys," called McMaisters to a couple of brakemen who had been standing near in anticipation of hostilities.

But as they approached the Terror rose from his seat, whipped out two revolvers and issued an ultimatum on the spot. "Now, you look here," said James Terry, "I want ter put yer nax' to 'e ax' 'at I'm goin ter Red Rock, about 80 miles from here. Where's me ticket? Right here in me two ax's. 'e I'll go ter any queer business I'll put yer fellers on 'e Upper Sandusky in two shakes. Say?"

Conductor McMaisters was a good strategist. He saw at a glance that it would be a needless risk of life and blood to carry Terry's intrenched position by a frontal attack. He therefore reached for the signal cord and stood at the window at the same time waving his hand to the arriving reinforcements to follow him.

There was an immediate session of the board of strategy in the baggage car at which a plan of attack was mapped out, although each member of the board declined to be interviewed at the close of the session. The Terror meanwhile remained standing with his back to the window and his eyes searching the situation before him to repel any attack from the front.

When the train stopped at the next station, the Hollygroves moved stealthily along the station platform from the baggage car to a position directly under the window where the Terror of Red Rock stood, master of the situation.

There had earlier been a meeting between the Hollygroves and the Red Rockites, and it took very little to provoke a mix up when men from the two places met. When the figures, which were that of one of McMaisters' brakemen, reached the Terror's window, he uttered a loud yell:

"I kin kick the best man from Red Rock that ever lived. I kin kick any man from that dead town with my right hand tied behind my back," was what the figure said.

The Terror of Red Rock grew red in the face. He surely couldn't allow such insults to be hurled against his town without resenting them. He hesitated.

"I would think that the Terror of Red Rock and two revolvers was the juiciest kind of cherry pie."

This was too much. The Terror hesitated no longer. He would uphold the honor of his town, come what might. Quick as a flash he threw up the window sash and stuck out his head and shoulders.

"Where's the mut that wants to fight?" he screamed.

But when he put his head out of the window and turned his back on passing events within the car the Terror played right into Conductor McMaisters' long suit. Following the plan of attack mapped out in the baggage car, the conductor was near at hand when Mr. Terry stuck his head and half his body out of the narrow car window. McMaisters made a quick motion and before the Terror could realize his position had about the window half way down and fastened it so that the bottom of the sash passed against the small of the Terror's back, holding him as in a vise.

Conductor McMaisters had provided himself with a flat stick which was an excellent paddle and he soon was giving the Terror the most punishing he ever had in his life. A brakeman came along and joined in the flank attack with an unflinching rod from another paddle. The Terror's plans were about as good as use as a diving rod in the Chicago river.

Under this terrific punishment from the Terror capitulated and he soon was giving the Terror the most punishing he ever had in his life. A CRABAPPLE PIPE.

Net of the Wood, but of the Fruit itself.

"Did you ever hear of a crabapple pipe?" said a New Orleans man who is an ardent lover of Lady Nicotine and who possesses a collection of smokers' tools that runs all the way from a black ebony "Bugal" to a huge porcelain "turban" that has seen service at Hotelberg. "Yes, I mean exactly what I say," he continued, "a crabapple pipe! You never heard of such a thing? Well, no more than I until I paid a visit to an old uncle of mine who has a farm on the Missouri side of the river a little above Cairo.

"The old man is a great smoker himself, and while he doesn't put on any particular style he is about as good a judge of the word as you would care to run across. His favorite mixture is a combination of light golden leaf with just enough plug cut to give it a body, and the pipe he likes best is an old fashioned clay bowl on a long reed stem.

"On the afternoon of my arrival he took me out to the extreme end of his farm to show me some fancy stock, and while climbing over a fence the bowl of his pipe came off, and, of course, hit the only stone in the whole field and was broken into a thousand pieces. I was distressed, because I knew how much my uncle enjoyed his smoke, and suggested that we return to the house for a new bowl. 'Oh, that isn't necessary,' he replied. 'I'll fix up one in a minute right here.'

"Several early crabapple trees were standing near by heavily laden with fruit. To my amazement the old man pulled down a limb, selected an extra large, perfectly sound apple and proceeded to scoop out the core with his knife, leaving a cup shaped cavity in the top. Then he pushed the reed stem through the side, cleaned it out with a straw, loaded the machine from his tobacco pouch and in a moment more was puffing away as happy as a king.

"The apple was of the yellow variety, hard and about the size of a large egg plant. It was very heavy, but, strange to say, that had no apparent effect on the burning of the tobacco, nor did it, as far as I was able to discover, impart any peculiar taste to the smoke. My uncle laughed heartily at my surprise and assured me that crabapple pies were frequently indulged in by all old timers in the Missouri valley region. I tried one myself that night and found it tip-top."

New Orleans Times-Democrat.

THE POINT OF VIEW.

Things Appear Differently to Different Eyes.

One of the essential things for one that would influence others is the ability to see things as they look to those whom he addresses. A lack of this ability has been responsible for the failure of many persons who would otherwise have been successful as teachers, missionaries, lawyers before juries and even orators and statesmen.

Striking illustrations of the different aspects things wear in the eyes of different people are constantly coming to light. A party of American travelers, journeying hither up the Nile, expressed a desire to celebrate Washington's birthday in some appropriate manner. Their chief accordingly prepared a great frosted cake, upon which he executed in confectionery a representation of George Washington after having familiarized himself with the life and achievements of his subject.

As represented in sugar Washington wore a turban on his head and a great sash across his breast. He was smoking a long pipe, and before him some dancing girls were performing. This was the way the greatness of George Washington looked to the Arab chieftain who was with him.

In China, that land of strange contrasts, many amusing instances of a similar kind may be found. "Pilgrim's Progress," as translated and illustrated by native artists, shows a Chinese man in pigtail, the dungeon of Giant Despair as the familiar wooden cage of Chinese criminals, while the angels are arrayed in the latest productions of Peking dressmakers.

A Chinese publication describes Americans as "living for months without eating a mouthful of rice" and never enjoying themselves "by sitting quiet and waiting for their ancestors' graves," but instead jumping around and kicking a ball as if paid for it.

How does this thing look to the Turk, the Chinaman, the Jew, the Englishman, the northerner, the southerner, is the question that we should answer in any controversy before becoming too sure of our own position. All the world does not look through the same spectacles. —Louis Star.

Growth of French Jacobin Clubs. A Jacobin club was established at Marseilles before the end of 1789, and within the first six months of 1790 one was organized in each of the large towns. But it was after the national federation, July 14, 1790, that Jacobin influence spread most rapidly.

These branch societies began to be organized all over France, and as an aid to the cause of the Revolution the Committee of Public Safety, in the autumn of 1790, founded the Journal des Amis de la Constitution, of which Lacroix became editor. The journal spread Jacobin opinions and inspired rapidly the organization of clubs. Before the end of the year Lacroix was able to publish a list of over 120 provincial clubs. By 1791 there were nearly 400. In July of the next year this number had increased to 1,200, and when the republic was established excellent authority estimates the number of affiliated clubs at 20,000, one for every commune in France.

Very soon these clubs became centers of the advanced revolutionary feeling. The young radicals of the provincial towns flocked to them, and through them they controlled local politics. In Paris, Lyons, Aix and Bordeaux there were two clubs. One was composed of the more respectable and the other of the more extreme elements of society. The latter was always a branch of the former, and in time of urgent need supplied it with rioters. —Chantaguan.

He Took the Tips. "I have tried many easy ways of making money in my time," said a man in an up town hotel last night, "but I found none nicing the hardest of all. But a friend of mine who believes in dreams, numbers and things of that kind is lucky. One day on our way to the race track he noticed a man carrying a hatbox, on which were the numbers 1 and 7. He immediately decided that the seventh horse in the first race would win. He played the horse, which was at long odds, and it won."

"On another occasion we were eating luncheon in a restaurant, and a big, gruff fellow was seated at the table just ahead of us. He had ordered some peaches and cream, but when the waiter brought them to him he refused to take them, saying that they were all green. He repeated this several times. My friend was reading the entries at one of the Long Island tracks and noticed that a horse named All Green was entered to run in one of the races. He went down to the track and won a big pot of money by playing All Green, which was quoted at 5 to 1 in the betting." —New York Tribune.

Thoughtful. Fairlie-Jack, have you that £10 I lent you the other day?

Pyralis—Not all of it, old chap, but what I have will do me a day or two longer. Jolly kind and thoughtful of you to inquire, though. —Glasgow Times.

A Lucid Verdict. The following verdict was rendered by a coroner's jury in Mississippi: "We, the jury, find that deceased came to his death by a stroke of an east bound train, No. 204 on I. C. railroad, at Pentress, Miss., in Choctaw county, on the 27th day of November, 1898, he being in a reasonable state of intoxication."

Lost Creek Obituary Style. At 8:15 o'clock Wednesday night the immortal spirit of St. Hawkins escaped from its prison of flesh and soared into great celestial realms. The deceased was a well known and a much loved man, and he was laid to rest on the hillside on Thursday, Farson Gray doing the honors at the entombment.

Death loves a shining mark, 'tis said, And you can wage your stock's life As you get a notch through your neck! May she requit in the next peaceful manner until Gabriel leads the last trumpet. —Denver Post.
